How to begin writing an IGNOU MMPP 1 Project?

The goals of this IGNOU CPSCM Project (BGPP-1) are to:

- Appreciate the shared goals of Higher Education, Research, and Training in order to enable individuals to participate in the process of building world peace, speeding national development, and increasing people's quality of life.
- Realizing Gandhi's philosophy and actions in general, and truth, nonviolence, sarvodaya, satyagraha, and sustainable development in particular.

IGNOU CPSCM Project (BGPP-1) Structure

Each study is unique, and your research framework will be decided by your location, discipline, subject, and approach. Projects in the humanities, for example, are usually organised like an extended essay, with chapters organised around certain subjects or case studies that support a primary argument. If you're doing empirical research on rural development, though, you should include all of the following elements in your study. Each will usually have its own chapter, though you may mix them together at times. The results and discussion, for example, will be intertwined rather than separated in certain forms of qualitative development research.

In addition, the layout of the sections varies by subject and country. Several institutions, for example, suggest starting the argument with the conclusion. Always follow your program's standards and seek advice from your supervisor if you have any questions about the format of your IGNOU CPSCM Project.

CPSCM Synopsis.

1) The Title of the Project

The project's title should make the nature and scope of the endeavour very apparent. It needs to be exact, precise, and concise. It is recommended that the topic be connected to your line of employment.

2) Guidance

In the introduction, you can outline the topic, the study's broad scope, why the issue is important, and clarify key ideas.

3) The Study's Justification

The problem statement should include a quick analysis and discussion of the topic's relevance. This is a justification for the study's conduct, to be more explicit. The present literature is reviewed, and gaps are identified in order to justify the study's topic selection.

4) The Goals

The IGNOU CPSCM Project objectives should make it clear why you are undertaking this task. A subject's aims are usually three to four. These objectives might be established to help you concentrate your efforts. Consider the case below: You want to learn more about female child dropout in rural areas. You might want to investigate the factors that contribute to the high dropout rate among people from various socioeconomic backgrounds. As a result, such goals will aid in determining the scope of the investigation.

5) Suggestion

The project demonstrates that the hypothesis is the most likely solution to the current situation. However, not all investigations entail the testing of hypotheses (the majority of experiments do). Your supervisor can talk about the type of research you want to pursue. Given the study's expected sample size of around 100 respondents, you may even elect to exclude hypotheses from your inquiry.

6) The Study's Context

If your study will include fieldwork, you must first define the scope of the investigation. The term "universe" refers to the whole region or population that is sampled in a research. This will vary depending on the geographical scope and study unit of the study. If you're researching the features of homes in a hamlet, for example, the study's universe will include all households. From this universe, you will select a random sample.

7) Use of visuals

You must pick a random sample of the population if your IGNOU CPSCM project is based on field research. A sample is a fraction of the population that is represented. Sampling can be done in a number of different ways, including randomly or in groups. Consult any standard statistics book you may have read in preparation for Research Methods in Information Security to learn more about the various sample procedures.

8) Data Collection Instruments

You should specify the tools you'll use to get data from various sources. Due to the intrinsic complexity and variety of social reality, you may need to use a variety of methodologies for a certain study.

9) Data Interpretation

Statistical approaches may be used to analyse data once the raw data has been scrutinised and coded. It's a good idea to offer a description of the methods you plan to use in your IGNOU BGPP-1 synopsis.

10) Compilations

Important statistical data such as percentages, means, medians, standard deviations, and correlations will be included in the tables.

Tables will be numbered in accordance with this (e.g., Chapter 1 will have Tables 1.1, 1.2, and so on; Chapter 2 will have Tables 2.1, 2.2, and so on). The table number will be followed by a table title that is as short as feasible while yet effectively summarising the contents of the table. The source of a table should be stated beneath it if it was taken from another source. Three paragraphs can help you understand the table: (i) an overview of the parameter or issue, (ii) an interpretation, and (iii) important results and indications.

11) Chapter Organization

The report's structure will be guided by the chapter plan or chapterization. This activity will assist you in completing your IGNOU CPSCM dissertation in a timely and organised manner.

12) Structure of the Report

You must follow the following guidelines when preparing an IGNOU CPSCM Project Report:

- Make a chapter-by-chapter outline.
- Each chapter should be around the same length. A chapter should not be 15 pages long while another is 40 pages long, for example. A chapter should be around 20 pages long.

The following information will be provided in each chapter:

- The designation of a chapter
- A chapter's title
- A quick rundown
- There must be a main title, a subtitle, and a sub-sub title.

- Citations that are suitable
- Graphics/illustrations, etc.
- Presented in an appropriate manner with a suitable layout.
- Tables should not be crammed into chapters. A chapter might have anything from five to seven tables.
- Only the most important parts of the document should be tallied.
- The remaining findings may be summed up in a storey format.

IGNOU CPSCM Project Report (BGPP-1) Writing Format

IGNOU CPSCM Project Report should be roughly 20,000 words long (including the title page, acknowledgements, and bibliographic references). While statistical and documentary appendices like questionnaires, surveys, interview schedules, and other data gathering items are required, they should be kept to a minimum.

- On A4-size paper, type or word process the IGNOU CPSCM Dissertation.
- All content in the dissertation's main body should be 1.5-line spaced and printed on one side of the page with one-inch margins, with the exception of bibliographic references.
- Pages should be numbered in ascending order at the bottom-centre.
- Spiral-bind the finished dissertation and the accepted BGPP-1 summary between light plastic sheets.

The IGNOU CPSCM Report's contents should be organised as follows:

1) On the project's cover page, include the title of the IGNOU

Before  WhatsApp us  student's name and enrollment number, the academic supervisor's name, the degree programme for which the project was prepared, the university's name, and the month and year of submission.

2) The title page should include the same information as the cover page, as well as the following statement: "This IGNOU BGPP-1 Project is submitted in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the Indira Gandhi National Open University's Certificate in Peace Studies and Conflict Management degree," followed by the submission date (month and year).

3) A note from the candidate's Academic Supervisor stating that the dissertation is original work and that it should be submitted to the examiner.

4) A list of the dissertation's chapters, with pertinent divisions and page numbers, as well as page numbers for bibliographic references and any figures, tables, or maps, should be included in the Table of Contents.

5) Acknowledgements: You may like to express gratitude for any assistance obtained throughout the preparation of the IGNOU BGPP-1 Project.

6) The main content is broken down into chapters (usually three or four, with an Introduction and Conclusion), bibliographic references, and appendices if appropriate. The first page of each chapter, bibliography, and appendix should be blank; however, elements contained inside primary headings may continue on the same page. The main text of the IGNOU BGPP-1 Report should be ranked in order of importance. A list of all books referenced in the chapters, as well as any essential sources researched during the dissertation's creation, should be included in the bibliography.

7) The IGNOU CPSCM Synopsis must be authorised by the Faculty Committee after the completion of the IGNOU CPSCM Report
